Welcome to

The Road Home

There comes a time in life when something shifts on the inside of you. It's not loud, and it's not something you can always explain—but you feel it. The way you think, the way you speak, even the way you walk through your days… it all starts to matter a little more. Everything seems to be a bit more intentional, a little less casual. It's almost like you are packing for a trip and meticulously placing everything in your bag.

I find myself in that kind of season right now. It's not a season of rushing, and it's not a season of trying to prove myself to anyone. If anything, it's quieter than that. It's a season where I feel the weight of my steps. Where I think a little longer before I speak. Where I'm more aware of the thoughts I allow to settle in my heart.

I've walked a lot of roads in my life—some steady, some uncertain, and a few I'd just as soon not travel again. But this road feels different. It feels intentional. It feels full of purpose. Scripture says, "Ponder the path of thy feet" (Proverbs 4:26). That's been sitting with me. It's not just about where I'm going, but how I'm getting there. Am I walking in peace? Am I walking in truth? Am I walking in a way that honors the One who's been so faithful to me? And then again, Am I walking with people who are walking with me? Amos 3:3 says," Can two walk together except the be agreed?" I have become a lot more selective of who I am listening to.

And then there are the thoughts. Those quiet, unseen places where so much begins. I've learned that if I don't tend to them, they'll tend to me. So I try, as best I can, to bring them into the light of Christ—to keep them clean, honest, and right.

My words, too, have come under a different kind of watch. Not because I'm trying to be perfect, but because I've seen what words can do. They can linger in a heart long after they're spoken. So I want mine to be true… and if possible, kind.

This season isn't about getting everything right. It's about being more aware. More present. More intentional. It's about making every step count… because I know they all lead somewhere. And these days, I want them leading me closer to Him on "The Road Home."

Thoughts from Church Signs:

-The fact that there's a highway to hell and only a stairway to heaven says a lot about anticipated traffic numbers.
-Do you spend your time with God's Book or Facebook?
-Acting perfect in church is like dressing up for an X-Ray!
-Tweet others as you want to be tweeted.
-Don't give up! Moses was once a basket case!
-Our sign is broke. Come inside for the message.
-God recycles. He made you from dust.
-Jesus is God's selfie.
-Need a lifeguard? He walks on water.
-When you throw mud, you lose ground.
-Visitors welcomed. Members expected.
-Lord, help us to be the people our dogs think we are.
